

About the Contributors

Amar M. Dhere is a lecturer at Indira College of Commerce and Science, Pune. He completed M.Sc in Environmental Science and M.A. in Sociology. He has authored thirteen books and published twenty five research articles in national and international level.

Anne Mabry is Associate Professor, ESL Program, New Jersey City University. She is Coordinator of ESL Program and had been Director, Honors Program at New Jersey City University. Dr. Mabry holds an Ed .D. in TESOL from Teachers College, Columbia University; her dissertation focused on the communication and learning strategies of learners of English as a second language. She has presented at national and state conferences on such topics as communication strategies, classroom use of the Internet, and technology-related issues. She directed three Ethnolinguistic Minority Student (ELMS) grants, funded by the New Jersey Commission on Higher Education. Her teaching interests are the use of literature in the classroom as a way to foster critical thinking, and the research writing process. She is conversant in Mandarin.

Arvind M. Nawale is Assistant Professor and Head, Department of English, Shivaji Mahavidhyalaya, Udgir, Latur, (M.S.), India. . He did PhD on Arun Joshi's novels. He has published few research papers and also edited few books. He has also presented papers conferences and workshops. He is also a Commissioned N.C.C. Officer with Captain's Rank.

David Toh Kusi obtained a BA in English, an MA in Modern British Literature and a DEA in Modern Anglo-Irish Poetry. He is currently a PhD candidate and a research Assistant Lecturer at the Higher Teachers' Training College in the University of Maroua, Cameroon. He is a critic and a contributing poet to Emerging Voices: Anthology of Young Anglophone Cameroon Poets.

Dena Ratner received an M.A., Liberal Studies from The New School for Social Research Spring 2010 and a B.A., History and Creative Writing from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Spring 2006. She studied at CET Jewish Studies in Prague, Czech Republic. She worked as Teaching Assistant at The New School for Social Research, University of North Carolina. She worked as Editorial Assistant for Oxford University Press and as a freelance writer for few organizations. She will be entering a doctoral program in English at Louisiana State University in Fall 2010.

Fakrul Alam is Professor of English at the University of Dhaka and also Honorary Adviser, Department of English, East West University. He did PhD on "Daniel Defoe and Colonial Propaganda", University of British Columbia, Canada, in 1984, and M.A in English from Simon Fraser University, Canada, 1980 and M.A in English from the University of Dhaka, Bangladesh in 1975. His current research and teaching interests include Tagore in Translation, South Asian Writing in English, English Writing on India, Melville and the American Literary Renaissance, American Literary History, Colonialism/Postcolonialism. He was a Fulbright Scholar and a Visiting Associate Professor at Clemson University, USA, and Visiting Professor at Jadavpur University, India. Prof. Alam was Director of the Advanced Studies in Humanities of the University and Adviser, Dhaka University Central Library. He is currently a member of the Education Policy Implementation Committee constituted recently by the Government of Bangladesh to formulate a new education policy for the country. He is the author of the books: Imperial Entanglements and Literature in English, South Asian Writers in English, Jibananda Das: Selected Poems, Bharati Mukherjee, and Daniel Defoe: Colonial Propagandist. He has been editor of Dhaka University Studies and the Asiatic Society Journal. He was in the jury of the Eurasia region of the Commonwealth Writers Prize for 2003. He is currently co-editing The New Tagore Reader (with Radha Chakravarty) for Visva-Bharati and working on his translations of Tagore's verse.

Meghamala De (Mahanta) is Lecturer of Bengali, Nehru College, Kachhar, Assam, India. She did PhD on "Bibhutibhusaner upanyase naree parisar" from Assam University under the supervision of Dr. Tapadhir Bhattacharjee. She regularly publishes in journals and magazines.

Milankanti Satpathy is Assistant Professor, Department of Bengali, Balarampur College, Purulia, India. He did PhD on Samsur Rahaman from Burdwan University. He has published few research papers.

Renu Bhargava is Professor, Indira School of Business Studies, Pune. Dr Bhargava is heading the business school as the Director and has a keen focus on global sustainability initiatives; her Institution is a signatory to the Principles of Responsible Management Education (PRME), which is a United Nations body for advocating the integration of sustainable initiatives in business and education. With an experience of 22 years in Corporate, Academics and Research, Dr Bhargava keenly pursues research and conferences based on themes of sustainability.

Robert Tindol is associate professor of English at Shantou University in Shantou, China. From 2007 to 2010 he had been Assistant Professor of English and communications at Upper Iowa University. He earned his Ph.D. in English at Claremont Graduate University in Claremont, California. Tindol's academic interests include the role of science in American society and the interactions between science and literature. He is currently working on a book about the influence of early American Puritanism on the public's attitude toward science. Tindol worked for a daily newspaper and a statewide political magazine in Texas and for a regional wire service in Los Angeles. In addition, he previously worked for 11 years as lead science writer at the California Institute of Technology, and for 9 years as a science writer in the news bureau at the University of Texas at Austin. He taught journalism as an adjunct at Howard Payne University in Brownwood, Texas, while regional editor at the Brownwood Bulletin, and later taught English as an adjunct at Austin Community College and Pasadena City College in Pasadena, California.

Tapan Kumar Mishra is a renowned teacher, researcher and administrator. He is the Principal of Vidyasagar College, Kolkata. His area of specialization is Forest Ecology and Ethnobotany. He has published seven books and monographs both in English and Bengali and more than fifty papers in different international and national scientific journals. He is a Fellow of Society of Ethnobotanists. His hobby is to read and write on Eco-politics.

Xiaohui Xue is Associate Professor of English at Xi'an International Studies University in China. She is also a visiting scholar at the University of Florida in America. She did Ph. D on "Challenging Traditional Values and Assumptions—A Thematic Study of Edith Wharton's Six Major Novels," Beijing Foreign Studies University, China, in 2006, and MA in English from Xi'an International Studies University, China, in 2000. Her current research and teaching interests include modern and contemporary American fiction, women's literature, Greco-Roman mythology and ecocritical literature. She has published a book on the study of Edith Wharton, a book of translation of poems by Chinese American poets and a textbook on English listening. Besides, she has translated a novella SisterYinxiu by a famous Chinese writer into English. In addition, she has published about 20 essays on English literature in both China and America, among which "Who Is the Real Victim?—A Feminist Decoding of Rip Van Winkle" won the third prize for Excellent Humanitarian and Social Science These of Shaanxi province in 2007.
